SUMMERTIME & THE READING IS EASY

By Nancy Pate

THE FOLLOWING BOOKS ARE AMONG the hard-covers expected to put some sizzle in summer book sales:

"Early Reagan: Ronald Reagan 1911-1966," by Anne Edwards (Morrow, $17.95): The biographer of Margaret Mitchell, Vivien Leigh and Katharine Hepburn chronicles Ronnie's childhood and his rise to power as a movie star and as a politician.

"Hemingway," by Kenneth S. Lynn (Simon & Schuster, $24.95): Lynn, the biographer of William Dean Howells and Mark Twain, looks at the darker side of the private Hemingway and its influence on his work.

"Presumed Innocent," by Scott Turow (Farrar Straus & Giroux, $18.95): The author wrote about his first year in law school in the acclaimed "One L." His new book is a novel about a lawyer who is first charged with solving the murder of a young woman and then finds himself accused of the crime.

"Puss in Boots," by Ed McBain (Henry Holt, $15.95): In the seventh novel featuring Florida attorney Matthew Hope, a film editor is murdered in a parking lot and her husband is accused.

"Satisfaction," by Rae Lawrence (Poseidon Press, $18.95): Four daughters of famous families meet at Radcliffe as freshmen in 1972. All find success in later life; all are in love with the same man.

"All Manner of Riches," by Mary Elmsblad (Viking, $18.95): This novel spans 25 years as it tells the story of a young woman from a poverty-stricken background who becomes a successful and powerful Texas attorney.

"Elvis World," by Jane and Michael Stern (Knopf, $35): This lavishly illustrated tribute to the king of rock 'n' roll will be published to coincide with the 10th anniversary of the singer's death.

"The Five Bells and Bladebone," by Martha Grimes (Little, Brown, $15.95): In the ninth mystery featuring Scotland Yard's Richard Jury and his aristocratic pal, Melrose Plant, the game is afoot when a corpse is discovered in a piece of antique furniture.

"A Green Flash," by Winston Graham (Random House, $17.95): Counterfeit perfume and counterfeit emotion propel this suspense story about a young man and an older woman. Graham is the author of "Marnie" and the Poldark series.

"Patriot Games," by Tom Clancy (Putnam, $19.95): Clancy, whose novel "Red Storm Rising" is still on the best-seller lists, brings back the hero of "The Hunt for Red October" in his new thriller. CIA analyst Jack Ryan gets involved battling terrorism while vacationing in London.

"Playing the Field," by Mamie Van Doren with Art Aveline (Putnam, $18.95): The '50s screen star and sex symbol confesses to a variety of dalliances with the likes of Joe Namath, Howard Hughes, Steve McQueen, Eddie Fisher and Ray Anthony.

"You Must Remember This," by Joyce Carol Oates (Dutton, $19.95): Oates sets her latest novel in the '50s, focusing on an ordinary family and an obsessive love affair that breaks with all convention.
